

Stainless Steel Forks (Clad or Solid)

Both options can be offered to suit various applications and preferences. Its primary use is in a potentially volatile environment such as a chemical works where a spark can occur when the forks come into contact with the ground or intended load. The most cost effective option is clad forks, which once worn, can be re-clad and introduced back into service. The rear of the fork remains unclad.

